Partner Counseling and Referral Services (PCRS)

Disease Intervention Specialists (DIS) workers are state employees trained to interview, counsel, and locate sexual and/or drug using partners of individuals with HIV and/or a sexually transmitted disease, and notify them of their possible risk of exposure.

PCRS, also known as Partner Notification, is a voluntary service. Notification is always face-to-face and in private, to assure that the person being informed is the same as the person who was named by the partners.

All information is confidential. The DIS worker is not notified of the client's name, and his/her information is never revealed or acknowledged. No records are kept – notes are shredded and burned after notifications are performed.

Massachusetts General Law, Chapter 111, Section 70F

(MGL C111, SEC 70F) protects the confidentiality of an individual's HIV status and provides that a physician, health care provider, or health care facility may not:

- Test a person for HIV
- Reveal to a third party that a person took the HIV test
- Disclose to third parties the results of a person's HIV test without first obtaining a person's written informed consent.
